Historical Note:

William Joseph Randall was born in Independence, Missouri in 1909. He obtained his undergraduate degree from the University of Missouri and went on to graduate from the Kansas City School of Law in 1936. He passed the bar exam the same year, and practiced law in Independence. In 1943, Randall was drafted into the United States Army and served in the Philippines during World War II. He eventually rose to the rank of Sergeant before being discharged in 1945.

When he returned to Independence, Randall was elected as a judge of the Jackson County Court. He had a long career there and served the county for six terms. When Congressman George H. Christopher died unexpectedly just two months into his term in 1959, a special election was held to find his successor. As a candidate, Randall worked diligently to gain the trust of rural Missouri voters. Through these grassroots efforts, he was able to win the election and the seat in Congress. Randall always considered rural Missourians to be his most steadfast supporters and worked to represent their interests in the federal government.

As a Congressman, Randall was considered a conservative democrat. He primarily focused on government operations, veteran's affairs, supporting the aging population, social welfare and education. He was also known for his anti-corruption work in Immigration and Naturalization. During his time in Congress, he was on the Armed Services Committee and the Government Operations Committee. Additionally, he founded and was the chair for the House Select Committee on Aging.

Randall was the primary sponsor of two bills that passed: the Federal Records Management Amendments and the Harry S. Truman Memorial Scholarship Act. He sponsored many other bills as well, often related to Social Security and the elderly as well as Veteran's issues. Notably, Randall voted in support of the Civil Rights Act of 1960 and 1964 but voted against the Civil Rights Act of 1966.

Randall was a representative that was very focused on the needs of Missouri. He advocated for his constituents and sometimes boasted that he never voted for foreign aid, preferring to prioritize his home country and citizens. Many of his accomplishments included improvements to Missouri's infrastructure, such as maintaining Missouri's place on the Space Committee, the Kaysinger Dam Project, and opening the Independence Post Office among several other post offices in the state. Randall kept a close eye on the Postal Service and made many appointments to the department. This complicated his relationship with fellow Missourian and former President Harry S. Truman, as Truman often had different ideas on who should be placed in various appointments. However, Randall is often considered a close ally of Truman as he and the former president frequently worked together on Missouri issues.

Randall served in the United States Congress for 18 years before he retired in 1977. After his retirement, he continued practicing law privately and spent time lobbying for Railroad interests. He passed away in his hometown of Independence Missouri at the age of 90 in 2000.
