Historical Note:

Katherine Jones is an award-winning photojournalist who has been employed at the Idaho Statesman in Boise for over 25 years. At the Statesman, she writes a bi-weekly column called

Heart of Treasure Valley, which aims to showcase compelling life stories through portraits and interviews, all with a common theme of “heart.” Jones received a BFA from the Kansas City Art Institute in 1978 and an MA in photojournalism in 1989 from the University of Missouri-Columbia. She has had internships at the Kansas City Star, Grand Rapids Press, and National Geographic World Magazine, as well as jobs at Kansas City’s Northeast News, the Tacoma News Tribune, and the Seattle Times. Most of the materials in this collection come from Jones’ time at the Kansas City Art Institute, the Kansas City Star, and the University of Missouri.

Arrangement:

The collection is arranged chronologically in 60 folders. Materials have been divided into folders by type: photographs and proofs, slides, negatives, and newspapers.

Scope and Content Note:

The Katherine Jones Collection consists of photographs, slides, negatives, and newspapers from Jones’ early work in photography and photojournalism, mostly in the Kansas City and Columbia area. Most of the photographs were associated with Jones’ college curriculum, both undergraduate and graduate, as well as internships at various news outlets.
