Introduction

Approximately 19 cubic feet

Leo A. Drey was an environmental activist and the owner of extensive tracts of Missouri land. Throughout his life, Drey was involved in many conservation projects, including the Natural Streams Act, Ozark National Scenic Riverways, and the Open Space Council. The collection includes correspondence, reports, meeting minutes, maps, legal materials, and newspaper clippings reflecting Drey's interests in environmental issues in Missouri.

Leo Drey was born in St. Louis in 1917. He graduated from Antioch College, in Yellow Springs, Ohio, in 1939. During World War II Drey served as assistant to the General Staff Officer in charge of the New York Port of Embarkation. After the war, he returned to the Wohl Shoe Company, where he was an assistant to the treasurer.

In 1950 Drey resigned from the Wohl Shoe Company to follow his all-consuming interest in the outdoors. He began the highly speculative, gradual acquisition of timberland in Missouri's Ozarks. He created Pioneer Forest, 150,000 acres in Shannon County, Dent County, Texas County, Reynolds County, Carter County, and Ripley County, Missouri. Drey advocates the selective harvesting of timber rather than clear-cutting and has proved that by sustained forestry, it is possible to have a self-supporting forest, which is a place of beauty.

Drey had a great interest in conservation and environmental issues. He served as chairman of the Environmental Task Force of the East-West Gateway Coordinating Council. He has helped to establish conservation policies for the State of Missouri and the Federal Government, including the creation of wild rivers legislation and the Ozark National Scenic Riverways. He founded and helped support the St. Louis Coalition for the Environment and the Open Space Council for the St. Louis Region. He funded the Natural Areas Survey for the State of Missouri and the Natural Streams Act campaign. He established the LAD Foundation to help fund such projects and to hold in a trust natural areas for preservation. Drey helped to create the Ozark Trail, a 150-mile long hiking trail through Missouri and Arkansas, by donating a unique series of easements through parts of his working timberland.

Drey served for many years on the board of the School of Forestry, Fisheries, and Wildlife Advisory Council of the University of Missouri. He has also served for many years on the Antioch University Board of Trustees. Over the years Drey has received many awards and honors including the Conservation Service Award from the U.S. Department of the Interior, a Citation of Merit and Honorary Membership from the Forestry Alumni Association of the University of Missouri, the Forest Conservation Award from the Conservation Federation of Missouri, the Environmental Quality Award from the Environmental Protection Agency, and an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters.
from Antioch University.

Leo A. Drey died on May 26, 2015.
