Historical Note:

The General Assembly of the State of Missouri granted a charter to Christian Female College on 18 January 1851. It was the first women's college chartered in Missouri, and one of the first (if not the first) chartered west of the Mississippi River. The board of trustees held its first meeting in Columbia on February 3rd.

April 7th was chosen as Christian Female College's official opening date. Its first session was held in the Christian Church meeting house and a two-room storehouse owned by William Y. Hitt. By August the board had purchased the estate of Dr. James Bennett and converted the main house into classrooms. The buildings and grounds were formally dedicated in 1852.

John Augustus Williams served as Christian's first president. He was replaced by Lanceford B. Wilkes in 1856. Two years later Joseph K. Rogers succeeded Wilkes. During Rogers's administration east and west wings were added to the original Bennett mansion to accommodate an increasing enrollment.

George S. Bryant took over the presidency from Rogers in 1877. Six years later he resigned, and the board appointed William A. Oldham as president. Through Oldham's efforts a chapel was built, the library enlarged, and improvements made on the physical plant. He also supervised the addition of a fourth floor to the original college mansion.

In 1893 Franklin St. Clair became president of Christian Female College. Upon his death a few months later, the board offered the presidency to his widow, Luella St. Clair. She was Christian's first female president and one of the first female college presidents in the United States. She was forced to leave Christian four years later and travel abroad in order to restore her failing health. Emma Frederick Moore, an associate of St. Clair's replaced her as president.

In a bold move, the board elected St. Clair co-president with Moore in 1899 and deeded the college to them in exchange for the construction of some badly needed buildings. Through private fundraising campaigns, St. Clair and Moore were able to add four new buildings to the campus.

St. Clair Hall was completed in 1900. Originally meant as a memorial to Franklin St. Clair, the hall ultimately came to be regarded as a tribute to Luella St. Clair. Construction of the auditorium was finished in 1903; the architect was a local Columbia woman, Mary Hale. Dorsey Hall, named in memory of trustee Jeremiah Spires Dorsey, was dedicated in 1911. Referred to as the “academic” hall, it added classrooms, laboratories, and a gymnasium to the growing school. A year later the Rogers Memorial Gateway, named for President Joseph K. Rogers, was dedicated. Missouri Hall, completed by 1920, provided additional living space. It was named Missouri because a large portion of the funds needed for its erection came from friends and alumnae in Missouri.

During the fury of building, St. Clair had resigned to accept the presidency of Hamilton College in 1903. She returned to Christian six years later to reassume the presidency after Moore’s early retirement. Soon afterward both women deeded Christian back to its trustees. St. Clair remained with Christian until her own retirement in 1920.

Edgar D. Lee became Christian’s next president. During his administration Christian’s scholastic standards rose, meeting those set by the University of Missouri. Student government was also organized under Lee’s guidance. And in 1929 Christian Female College became, simply, Christian College.

With Lee’s resignation in 1936, James C. Miller served as acting president until the board could appoint Eugene S. Briggs to succeed Lee. Briggs had only served two years when he resigned, and Miller was offered the presidency. Under Miller’s direction Hughes Hall, a residence hall named for trustee Frank Hughes, was built in 1939.

Kenneth Freeman succeeded Miller as president in 1956. He served nine years, during which time both Miller and Dulany Halls were built. Miller Hall “the modern hall,” was erected in 1960 as a residence hall. It was named for President James C. Miller. Dulany Hall, named for trustee William H. Dulany, was dedicated in 1965 as the new dining hall.

W. Merle Hill became Christian’s fifteenth president in 1965. During Hill’s twelve-year administration, Christian went through a period of change. North Hall, so named because it sat on the north edge of the campus, was constructed in 1967 as a residence hall. It was renamed for trustee Hartley G. Banks, Sr. three years later.

After more than a century of service as a women’s college, Christian began admitting men in 1969. That same year the original college mansion, minus two stories and both wings, was christened Williams Hall in honor of the school’s first president, John Augustus Williams.

Facing financial difficulties, Christian College started a unique fundraising campaign in early 1969. In exchange for the contribution of five million dollars, the board of trustees offered to rename the college. Advertisements were run in the Wall Street Journal, Forbes, Fortune, and several newspapers from across the country. As a result of the campaign, Christian College became Columbia College on July 1, 1970.

Bruce Kelly replaced Hill as president in 1977. He remained at Columbia College until 1984 when Donald Ruthenberg took over as president.

Scope and Content Note:

The records in this collection document the evolution of a mid-nineteenth century women's junior college into a late-twentieth century coeducational liberal arts college. The decades from the 1910s through the 1960s are best represented in the collection. The college's early years, from the 1850s to the turn of the century, and particularly, its more recent years, the 1970s and 1980s, are not as well represented. Unless noted, material within each series is arranged in alphabetical order by topic.

More complete series descriptions are in the container list.
