INTRODUCTION

Photographs of scenes across Missouri, many taken as part of Massie's work as Missouri's state photographer. Events highlighted include Winston Churchill's visit to Fulton, Governor Hearnes' inaugural celebrations in 1965 and 1969, and the Battle of Pilot Knob Centennial commemoration in 1964. The collection includes extensive coverage of the Missouri State Capitol building. Geographically, the collection covers much of Missouri, with particular focus on tourist destinations: St. Louis, Kansas City, Hannibal, Ste. Genevieve, and the Ozarks.

DONOR INFORMATION

The collection was donated to the State Historical Society of Missouri by Gerald Massie on February 28, 1980.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Gerald R. Massie, photographer, was born on September 22, 1911 in Clinton, Missouri. As a child, he won a Brownie camera and began his interest in photography. His early jobs were in newspapers, setting type, while continuing to practice photography as a freelancer. In 1942, Massie was drafted into the Army, where he served as an aerial and news photographer, and supervised a photo lab.

Following the war, in 1945, Massie became Missouri's first official state photographer as part of the Resources and Development Commission, a position he held until his retirement in 1974. Massie photographed Missouri parks, natural and historic sites, industry, business, and agriculture and his work was used extensively in promoting Missouri as a destination for recreation and economic development.

Massie married Henrietta L. Hendrich in 1945. Together they had a son, Dan T, and a daughter, Kathleen. Massie died in Jefferson City, Missouri, on May 11, 1989.

SEE ALSO

Additional photographs by Massie are held by the Missouri State Archives, Jefferson City, Missouri.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Massie photographs document many of Missouri's most celebrated features. Although not a comprehensive set of Massie's work, the collection provides a broad overview of his activities as Missouri's state photographer as well as several examples of focused coverage of events. The majority of the photographs are 8" x 10" silver gelatin prints. Some color photographs are also represented in color prints and transparencies for coverage of the Hearnes inauguration. The photographs are generally high quality.

Photographs have been arranged into the following series:

Events

Missouri State Capitol

Geographic

Subject

The collection is especially strong in its coverage of two events: the "Sinews of Peace" speech by Sir Winston Churchill, and the 1965 inauguration of Governor Warren E. Hearnes. The Missouri State Capitol building is well-represented, including coverage of the fire that destroyed the 1840 structure in 1911, and construction of the 1917 building. Images of Missouri tourist attractions, natural features, and economic activities span a wide range of locations and topics.

Many of the photographs are undated or tentatively dated, and the collection does not provide context for Massie's activities.
