Architectural drawings, specifications, photographs, and other material relating to Fuller's career as an architect in Kansas City, Missouri.

BIOGRAPHY:

Albert Burr Fuller was born December 28, 1889 in Kansas City, Missouri, the son and grandson of builders. At the age of 17 he began studying architecture in the office of Loren G. Middaugh and later, after 1911, with S.B. Tarbett and Leslie Simpson. He attended night school and took correspondence courses in architecture.

After World War I, Fuller opened an office in Kansas City and specialized in the design of private homes in the Country Club area. Some of his plans were pictured in Ladies Home Journal during this period.

During World War II, Fuller was employed by an engineering firm to assist in the remodeling of a factory in Milwaukee, Wisconsin into a small arms munitions plant. Following the War, he again opened his architect's office in Kansas City. He specialized in public buildings during this period with a heavy emphasis on churches.

In the summer of 1963 Fuller closed his office. He died at home on February 28, 1964. Albert Burr Fuller's brother, Edward Marshall Fuller, and son, Albert B. Fuller, Jr. were also architects.
