Introduction

Approximately 0.5 cubic foot.

The collection consists of reports, proposals, newspaper clippings, and photographs concerning the development of the Northeast Industrial District of Kansas City, Missouri, between 1940 and 1942.

Kansas City, Missouri, and Kansas City, Kansas, historically had two main industrial areas colloquially known as the East Bottoms and the West Bottoms. The West Bottoms, also referred to as the Northeast Industrial District, sits at the confluence of the Missouri and Kansas Rivers and is one of the oldest areas of the Kansas City metropolitan area. The area was home to the Kansas City Live Stock Exchange and the Kansas City Stockyards, the American Royal livestock show at Kemper Arena, and historically served as the heart of the city's meat packing industry.
