Historical Note:

Thomas (1874-1949) and William Drewin (1882-1947) Wight were born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, to Robert Adam and Emmaline MacLean Wight.

In 1891, at the age of seventeen, Thomas Wight traveled to Boston where he sought employment with an architectural firm. Having no formal architectural training, he answered an advertisement for a “boy” with the prestigious New York office of McKim, Mead, and White. Within a year he became a draftsman for the firm while working on the construction of the Boston Library. After the library’s completion, he was offered a position within the firm’s New York office by Charles McKim, with the requirement that Thomas remain employed with McKim, Mead, and White for ten years before establishing his own business. While working for McKim, Mead, and White, Thomas also spent a year studying at the American Academy in Rome. He attributed his time with the academy to his preference for the Neo-Classical style of architecture due to the design influences of the ancient Greeks and Romans.

In 1904, Thomas resigned from his position with the firm of McKim, Mead, and White to establish his own business. He was offered several prospective business partnerships in Cleveland, Toronto, and New York; however, it was the offer from his friend, Edward T. Wilder, for a potentially lucrative business investment in Kansas City that Thomas ultimately chose. Together they created the architectural firm of Wilder and Wight.

While Thomas Wight was busy establishing his own architectural firm, his brother William was walking in his footsteps. William traveled to Boston at the age of eighteen and secured a position, like his brother, with the architectural firm of McKim, Mead, and White. He spent ten years with the firm, which included one year of study in Europe. In 1911, he joined his brother’s firm after buying out Edward Wilder’s share. In 1916, the firm officially changed its name from Wilder and Wight to Wight and Wight.

Over the course of thirty years, the two brothers forged a successful and distinguished architectural career in Kansas City and the surrounding area. They were known for their Neo-Classical design style, their exceptional command of mass and proportion, as well as their exquisite attention to details.

William Wight died on October 29, 1947, and his brother Thomas followed him nearly two years later on October 6, 1949.

Arrangement:

The collection has been arranged into the following three series:

Manuscript
Architectural Drawings
Oversize

Scope and Content Note:*Manuscript

This series contains materials related to the Kansas City, Missouri, architectural firm of Wight and Wight (1916-1952), and its predecessor Wilder and Wight (1904-1916). These materials include eight photographs of furnishings and a photograph of the Bivouac home in Hubbards, Nova Scotia, all of which were designed by William Wight. Also included is a photograph of William Wight and Mrs. Frauk MacLennan.

In addition, there are three sets of specifications, two photostats of Southeast High School panels 1 and 2, correspondence from the Chevrolet Motor Company, accounts for items sold to C. W. Armour, memos from The Antique Galleries, and a copy of The Monthly Supplement from Who's Who.

Architectural Drawings

This series consists of materials pertaining to 144 sets of architectural drawings dating between 1904 and 1952 and constitute the bulk of the collection. These architectural drawings are predominately of buildings in and around the Kansas City metropolitan area; however, there are architectural drawings for buildings located in other areas of Missouri and Kansas, as well as buildings located in Tulsa, Oklahoma, Santa Rosa, New Mexico, and Ashland, Wisconsin.

The architectural drawings have been arranged by their assigned aperture card number for microfilming. Drawings 137.001 thru 137.021 are available on aperture cards and these cards are housed on site. The remainder of the drawings within this collection have aperture card numbers assigned to them however, there are no cards available.

Oversize

This series contains the calculations for steel work in the Holy Name Church. The location of the church is not indicated.
