Historical Note:

Neither author nor publisher is named for "A Message to the Homeseeker." It appears to have been organized in a joint effort by the business communities of Bonne Terre, Farmington, Flat River, and Fredericktown. This series of publication seems to have been active in the 1920s and 1930s. The booklets highlight neighboring towns with information on local businesses, public buildings, and churches. The descriptions are couched in language typical of early twentieth century "boosterism."

Arrangement:

The collection has been arranged in its original order.

Scope and Content Note:

The collection contains the booklet, "A Message to the Homeseeker," published in 1925. The booklet contains brief general statements introducing the sections for each community, followed by descriptions of the leading business establishments. Photographs of approximately half of the businesses accompany the profiles. Several churches and public institutions are also pictured. Bonne Terre, Farmington, Flat River, and Fredericktown are presented as clean, progressive towns, whose citizens, invariably described as "live" and "wide-awake," enjoyed considerable economic success. The booklet is organized by town and is forty-six pages long.
