Biographical Note:

William Devol Dobkins was born in 1879, on Courtois Creek near Berryman, Missouri in Crawford County. He was one of six children born to Joshua "Bud" and Anna Goad Dobkins. In 1884, Will's father died and his mother remarried his late father's cousin, John Wesley Lambert. When his mother and stepfather moved to Oklahoma, Will and his other siblings stayed in Missouri to be raised by relatives. Will, along with his stepbrother Otto Lambert, were raised by his father's cousin, "Uncle" Charley Dobkins, who lived on Huzzah Creek.

When Will was about twelve years old, he became interested in cameras and photography. He began experimenting and making photographs with any equipment he could find. At about that same time, he also decided to enter the Christian ministry. He started preaching around age 18, speaking at local churches and filling in for local pastors.

Will married Emma Ora Gregory, daughter of Winfield Scott and Susan Jane Compton Gregory on October 22, 1899. Together they had six children, Charles Winfield, Theodore Earnest, Mamie Leyla Opal, Pansey (Patricia) Elizabeth, William Arthur, and Marvin Richard. The family settled on Lost Creek, with Will working at Neely Downard's sawmill. He also preached in Crawford, Iron, Reynolds and Shannon counties. With his photography equipment and Bible packed, Will's two-week circuit would begin at Palmer, Missouri, where the outgoing mail started, and on to Belgrade and back, in varying routes. Along the way, he did carpentry work, took photographs, conducted church meetings, performed marriages and funerals, and picked up mail. When he returned home, he would process the photos he had taken and deliver them on his next circuit. His photography helped supplement his income, since preaching paid very little.

Will and Ora followed several other families from the area in 1908, relocating to Stroud, Oklahoma to raise cotton. He continued his ministry and photography there, as well as operating a cotton farm. By 1918, Will and his family left Oklahoma for St. Louis, Missouri, where he did carpentry work and preached at the Salvation Army. Tiring of city life, they returned to Crawford County in 1926, and purchased a farm at Berryman, Missouri. In 1944, with their children gone, Will and Ora moved into a home built by Will in the valley near Steelville. Ora passed away in 1963. Will continued to preach on occasions and lived there until his death in 1968 at age 89.

Arrangement:

The collection has been arranged in its original order.

Scope and Content Note:

The collection contains ninety-two images of life in and around Crawford County, Missouri. The collection includes portraits of families and their homes, school or church groups outside of community buildings, individuals riding horses or mules, farm scenes showing animal-drawn and steam-powered equipment, threshing, wagons with jerkline team hitches, charcoal production, and the Cherry Valley Railroad and Mine. A few images are studio shots. The collection of glass-plate negatives was stored in an old outbuilding when Dobkins moved to Steelville in 1944. In the early 1990s, the negatives were salvaged by his grandson, J. L. Dobkins.
