Historical Note:

The Aeronautical History Society of St. Louis was a non-profit organization founded in 1970, whose purpose was to encourage the study of aeronautical history, provide opportunities for the exchange of aeronautical information, and bring together mutual enthusiasts of airplanes within the St. Louis area. Additionally, throughout its years, the organization strived to celebrate St. Louis' prominent role in the history of American aeronautics.

Once a month, the Aeronautical History Society of St. Louis met to discuss aviation topics ranging from Lockheed P-80 Shoot Star jet fighter operations in post-war Germany to Missouri's own Ozark Air Lines. Among their most popular events were the annual Aviation Film Festival and "Swap and Sell Night" where members would exchange related memorabilia.

Arrangement:

The collection is arranged chronologically into one folder.

Scope and Content Note:

This collection contains monthly newsletters published by the Aeronautical History Society of St. Louis. The newsletters contain aeronautical news updates, messages from the president, recaps of monthly meetings, and "Society Want Ads," posted by members seeking information on aeronautical topics, such as the Lockheed P-80 Shooting Star jet fighter. The materials in this collection are arranged chronologically, dating from 1972 to 1974.
